A NEIGHBOR'S BAIRN.

BY HENRY IRVING.

At the present time, which the progress of realism, is marking an epoch in stage management, a little special attention may not inopportunely be given to the humanitarian branch of stage realism—that of food. The old days of pasteboard pie and wooden chickens are gone from good theaters—let us hope, forever. The real "veal and ham'er" in the interesting reproduction of "Dot" at the Folly was quite a success, and brought the dinner hour instincts of all present to the aid of histrionic effect. I was much struck, not long since, by the thoughtful consideration manifested by a charming young lady in a successful opera bouffe, who took care that the vast amount of real bread, which she had cut so gracefully, was ultimately distributed to that portion of the French army in the rear, who seemed to have been hitherto inadequately supplied with rations, and to whom the nightly addition to their present emolument may have been of some little service.

When, a year ago, we produced at the Lyceum, as a first piece, the old Scotch drama of "Cramond Brig," the various members of the company playing in the piece had full choice of wherewithal to wash down their "heed and harrigles" (of which, by the way, over a hundred were consumed during the run,) and the miller's supper became a nightly jollity, except, perhaps, to the Scotch nobility and the king's huntsmen, who with watery mouths and eager eyes, crowded the wings, forbidden by the irony of dramatic fate to enter upon the scene until the supper had been cleared away. This piece reminds me of an incident which came under my notice, a good many years ago. In the off season of a large provincial theater, in which I was a stock actor. I took an engagement at a small town, then known as one of the most thriving seaports of the North. The salary was little; the parts were long, and their was not much opportunity for gaining renown. However, it was better than remaining idle, as, at the worst, the amount of debt to be accumulated was minimized. The manager was not a bad fellow, and having been a good actor in his time, was only too glad to be surrounded by a class of actors whose service he could only obtain by the opportunity afforded by the bright Summer—in those palmy days the darkest and the wintriest season to the airy comedian or the thorough legitimate tragedian. Our opening bill consisted of "Cramond Brig," "Lord Darnley," "Wallace, the Hero of Scotland," and "Gilderoy, the Bonnie Boy," in all of which I played, besides contributing my share in the National Anthem, which was right loyally and loudly sung by the entire strength of the company. After the rehearsal of "Cramond Brig," our jolly manager said: "Now, boys, I shall stand a real supper to night; no paste-board, but a real sheep's head and a little drop of real Scotch." A tumult of applause.

The manager was as good as his word for at night there was a real head, well equipped with turnips and carrots, and the "drop of real Scotch." The neighbor's bairn," an important character in the scene, came in and took her seat as usual beside the miller's chair. She was a pretty, sad-eyed, intelligent child of some nine years old. In the course of the meal, when Jack Howison was freely passing the whisky, she leaned over to him and said, "Please, will you give me a little?" He looked surprised. She was so earnest in her request, that I whspered to her, "To-morrow, perhaps, if you want it very much, you shall have a thimbleful."

To-morrow night came, and, to my amusement, she produced from the pocket of her little plaid frock a bright piece of brass, and held it out to me. I said, "What's this?"

"A thimble, sir."

"But what am I to do with it?"

"You said you would give me a thimbleful of whiskey if I wanted it, and I do want it."

This was said so naturally that the audience laughed and applauded. I looked over to the miller, and found him with the but end of his knife and fork on the table, and his eyes wide open, gazing at us in astonishment. However, we were both experienced enough to pass off this unrehearsed effect as a part of the piece. I filled the thimble, and the child took it back carefully to her little "creepy" stoo near the miller. I watched her, and presently saw her turn her back to the audience and pour it into a halfpenny tin snuff-box. She covered the box with a bit of paper, and screwed on the lid, thus making the box pretty watertight, and put it into her pocket.

When the curtain fell, our manager came forward and patted the child's head "Why, my little girl," he said, "you are quite a genius. Your gag is the best thing in the piece. We must have it every night. But, my child, you mustn't drink the whisky! No, no! that would never do."

"O, sir, indeed I won't; I give you my word I won't!" she said quite earnestly, and ran to her dressing-room.

"Cramond Brig" had an unprecedented run of six nights, and the little lady always got her thimbleful of whiskey, and her round of applause. And each time I noticed that she corked up the former safely in the snuff-box. I was curious what she could possibly want with the spirit, and who she was and where she came from. I asked her, but she seemed so unwilling to tell, and turned so red, that I did not press her; but I found out that it was the old story—no mother, and a drunken father.

Still, it was strange; what could she want with the whisky—a child like her? It could not be for the drunken father. I was completely at fault. I took a fancy to the little thing, and I wished to fathom her secret, for a secret I felt sure there was. After the performance, I saw my little body come out. Poor little child, there was no mother or brother to see her to her home. She hurried up the street, and turning into the poorest quater of the town, entered the common stair of a tumble-down old house. I followed, feeling my way as best I could. She went up and up, till in the very top flat she entered a little room. A handful of fire glimmering in the grate revealed a sickly boy, some two years her junior, who crawled towards her from where he was lying before the fire.

"Cissy, I'm glad you're home," he said. "I thought you'd never come."

She put her arms round him, laid the poor little head on her thin shoulder, and took him over to the fire again, trying to comfort him as she went.

"Is the pain very bad to-night, Willie?"

"Yes," A sadder "yes" I never heard.

"Willie, I wish I could bear the pain for you."

"It's cruel of father to send me out in the wet; he knows how bad I am."

"Hush! Willie, hush! he might hear you."

"I don't care! I don't care! I wish he would kill me at once,"

The reckless abandon of the child's despair was dreadful.

"Hush! hush! he is our father, and we mustn't say such things!" This through her fast falling tears. Then she said, "Let me try and make the pain better."

The boy took off his shirt.

The girl leaned over and put her arms round him, and kissed the shoulder; she then put her hand into her pocket and took out her snuff-box.

"Oh, Willie, I wish we had more, so that it might cure the pain."

Having lighted a dip candle, she rubbed the child's rheumatic shoulder with the few drops of spirit, and then covered up the thin little body, and, sitting before the fire, took the boy's head on her knee and began to sing him to sleep.

I took another look into the room through the half-open door; my foot creaked the frightened eyes met mine. I put my finger to my lips and crept away.

But as I began to descend the stair, I met a drunken man ascending—slipping and stumbling as he came. He slipped and stumbled by me, and entered the room. I followed to the landing unnoticed, and stood in the dark shadow of the half-open door.

A hoarse, brutal voice growled: "What are you doing there?—get up!"

"I can't, father; Wille's head is on my knees."

"Get up!"

She gently laid the boy's head on the door, pillowing it on her little shawl, and stood up.

"Father, Willie is very sick! you ought to try to get him cured."

"Shut up! If I hear another word, I'll make you and him too keep yourselves quiet." And the brute flung himself on his bed, muttering to himself in his drunken semi oblivion: "Cure him, indeed! Not if I know it. That's not the way to get money: his cough is worth a lot alone. Cure him, indeed! Not likely!"

The black-hearted scoundrel!

The girl bowed her head lower and lower.

I could not bear it, I entered the room. The brute was on the bed already in his besotted sleep. The child stole up to me, and in a half-frightened whisper said, Oh, sir, oughhn't people to keep secrets, if they know them? I think they ought, if they are other people's." This with the dignity of a queen.

I could not gainsay her, so I said, as gravely as I could to the little woman, "The secret shall be kept, but you must ask me if you want anything."

She bent over, suddenly kissed my hand, and I went down stairs.

The next night she was shy in coming for the whisky, and I took care that she had good measure.

The last night of our long run of six nights, she looked more happy than I had ever seen her. When she came for the whisky she held out the thimble, and whispered to me with her poor, pale lips trembling, "You need only pretend to-night."

"Why?" I whispered.

"Because—he doesn't want it now. He's dead!"

Scotch consciousness of superiority is illustrated by the gardener who, when asked by his master, an English squire, how he liked the English, replied, "Weel, sir, being frae hame, and amang the English, I find nae great faut in them: but I maun mak this remark, that for ministers or gardeners, or onything needin' hede (head) wark, you maun come to us in the North."

A Severe Rebuke.

There is an indignation which is holy, and an anger that is without sin. It flashes sometimes from the most merciful of men when they stumble over some hypocrite's creed. Few had a more gentle spirit than the late Dr. Muhlenberg of New York. But his tender heart could glow with ire, and his soft words give place to strong expressions when inhumanity crossed his path. One day, during the Civil War, a poor woman came to him in great distress. She was the wife of a volunteer, and had failed to receive her usual remittance. Her landlord had threatened to turn her into the street for not paying her rent. The kind clergyman, learning who her landlord was, remarked:

"O, I know him well. Be comforted; I will see to it."

Going to him, he found the rich man engaged in counting a quantity of gold. Describing the poor tenant's distress, the doctor asked Dives to release her from paying the quarter's rent.

"Impossible!" he answered. "I've nothing to do with it; my agent attends to such matters. My business would be demoralized by such interference."

"Nay, but the poor woman occupies your house," gently remonstrated Dr. Muhlenberg. "She has paid you regularly until now, and will probably be able to pay in the future, if she receives money from her husband."

"Yes, yes, that may be all true, but the thing can't be done; it is not business."

"well, then, give me some of those gold pieces for her."

"By no means. I want every one of them to make up a sum I'm going to put in the bank."

"Well, sir," said Dr. Muhlenberg, rising to go—his indignation had already risen—"I would rather take my chance for the Kingdom of Heaven with the poorest, meanest, dirtiest beggar in the streets of New York than with you?"

THE SQUARE MAN.—The square man measures the same each way, and haint got no winny edges nor shaky lumber in him. He is free from knots and saps, and won't warp. He is clear stuff, and I don't care what you work him up into, he won't swell and he won't shrink. He is amongst men what good kiln dried boards are amongst carpenters, he won't season crack. It don't make any difference which side of him you come up to, he is the same bigness each way, and the only way to get at him any how, is to face him. He knows he is square, and never spends any time trying to prove it. The square man is one of the best shaped men the world has ever produced; he is one of them kind of chunks that you can't alter to fit a spot, but you must alter the spot to fit him.—Josh Billings.

An undergraduate was summoned before one of the Dons for not attending the 7 o'clock morning chapel. "Sir," said the Don, "let me hear what you have to say in excuse of your persistent absence from morning prayers." "Sir," replied the delinquent, "the service is too late for me to be present." "Too late, Sir! How can 7 in the morning be considered a late hour?" "Well," replied the ingenious offender, "were the hour 4 or 5, or even 6, I might manage to be present; but to sit up till 7 o'clock in the morning in order to go to church is more than human nature will endure!"

The English guinea was so called because the gold of which it was first made was brought from Guinea by an African trading company. Originally it was intended that the guinea should be worth 20s. but owing to a number of errors in calculating the proportion of the value of gold and silver, it never circulated at that value. Sir Isaac Newton fixed the true value of the guinea, in relation to silver, at 20s. 8d. and by his advice the Crown proclaimed that in the future it should be current at 21 s.

Chowder got a good dinner at home a few days ago by telling his wife that he was going to bring a judge home with him to that meal. When he arrived, alone, and Mrs. Chowder asked him where the Judge was, he triumphantly pointed to himself, and remarked: "I'm a good judge of a dinner." He will be obliged to get one some other way, hereafter.

Two young men out riding were passing a farmhouse where a farmer was trying to harness a mule. "Won't he draw?" said one of the horsemen. "Of course he will," said the farmer; "he draws the attention of every fool that passes."

Statistics prove that one who is knocked about in the world lives longer than one whose life is one of ease and comfort; and it is somewhat singular that they also prove that married men live longer than unmarried men.

An unused railroad ticket is exhibited in New Haven, which bears date Oct. 20, 1840 It is pink in color, bears a little picture of a passenger car, and reads: "Meriden, down and up."

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 17, 1881.

With the opening of the new week the talk of an extra session of Congress is revived and prominent members of both Houses who have heretofore been sanguine of the disposal of all necessary business this session, manifest a general despondency at not arriving at that result. This talk has extended even to those who have been most hopeful of staving off an extra session. This is incidental to the long debate on the funding bill. The anti-three per centers say the bill will consume a full week. The friends of the 3 per cent. measure, however, think the bill will go to the Senate to-morrow or next day. The Senate will undoubtedly raise the interest to 3½ per cent. and the bond to a five-twenty. It will then return to the House, which body will refuse to concur to the Senate amendments. The discussion will then be opened fresh on the amendments. Those opposed to funding at all will join the party to kill the bill, and then a lively fight will be the result. After this long contest is disposed of, will come the reapportionment; which promises to bring on a long debate; and a greater struggle still is impending on the legislative, judicial and sundry civil appropriation bills. Altogether the prospects for an extra session are favorable, to say the least.

Another matter, which, if brought up at all, must take precedence of some of the above measures is the infamous Morgan resolution for counting the electoral vote. The Democrats are now talking of forcing the measure through as soon as they collect 147 members, and a count of noses reveals the fact that but six are required, two of which can be summoned in a few hours any day. If the Democrats attempt to crowd this unrepublican measure through the mere question of delay will not enter at all into the consideration of its opponents. The fight will be the most desperate of any witnessed in Congress for years.

Mr. Newberry, of Michigan, who recently brought to the attention of Congress the fact that the Halifax award was made upon forged statistics and perjured testimony, has prepared and will introduce two joint resolutions on the subject. The first requests the President to open a correspondence with the British Goverument with a view to appointing a joint commission whose duty it shall be to inquire into the alleged frauds. The second provides for the appointment of a joint committee of Congress to investigate the matter. I doubt, however, if a majority of the members will vote to establish the precedent of going behind the buildings of a Tribunal of Arbitration.

COUNTY GOVERNMENT.

It appears to be the general opinion of the Legislators that the clause of the Constitution, relating to elections in every even year, applies only to State officers, and not to county. Under these circumstances a number of "County Government" bills are pending in the Legislature, and, from the fate of the bill passed at the last Session, it is presumed that they are capable of keeping within the bounds of the Constitution. Almost without exception they provide for the election of county officers this year, and that they be salary offices—fees to be paid into the County Treasury. One of the bills in question, which has more particularly passed under our scrutiny, provides for the election this year of county officers, including Supervisors. It requires the election of five Supervisors—one from each district. This, doubtless, would prove satisfactory to the taxpayers of this county. We believe that if the county was districted as follows: Antelope and Bridgeport, Bodie, two; Mill Creek; and Benton and Mammoth, five business men could be elected—men who will promptly meet, put in a fair day's work; expedite business, and adjourn within three or four days. Justice to those having business with the Board demands a prompt dispatch of business. One serious objection is the salary—$800, and mileage. This, in Mono, is too much for the service rendered, as the whole business, additional duties being imposed, could be transacted within forty days. The class, fifth, which is assigned to this county provides liberal salaries for its officers, and will be acceptable to those who foot the bills. As the classes are based upon the census returns, it will be safe from manipulators who may attempt to increase salaries. Of course, there is a diversity of opinion as to the policy of an election this year. Some oppose it as entailing an unnecessary expense to the county; others for the loaves and fishes. Some favor it for a "change;" some that they may feed at the public crib; and others that evils may be remedied by a bill of this description.

Isabel Hammett Raymond contributes a readable article entitled A Pescadero Pebble. C. T. Hopkins, of San Francisco, contributes a very able article on Taxation in California. A Californian Cradle Song is a poem by Charles H. Phelps. Wm. Sloane Kennedy gives a Study of Walt Whitman; then comes Six weeks at Ilkley by Mary R. Higham, followed by Alvarado of Madrid, a poem by Yda Addis. Martin Kellogg tells of People would Like to Endow. E. R. Sill asks, Shall we have Free High Schools? William D. Armes tells us of A Forgotten Poet. Then comes interesting notes from the Note Book; Science and Industry, Arts and Artists, Drama and Stage and Outcroppings. The Californian is worthy of a large subscription list, and it should be gratifying to every Californian to know that this excellent monthly is on the high road to success. Published by the California Publishing Co., 202 Sansome street, San Francisco, at $4 per annum.

FLORAL GUIDE.—We are in receipt of Vick's Floral Guide, a beautiful little work of 113 pages published by James Vick, of Rochester, N. The cost of the forms, etc., to be issued in connection with the taking of the English census in April next, will be $500,000, and it is estimated that 8,000,000 returns will be made. A firm of soap manufacturers, of London, offers to defray the cost, providing they are allowed to advertise on the back of all forms issued.

An ice-bridge railroad was, last week, laid across the river at Longuell, Quebec, and on the first day a large quantity of freight was sent over. In the afternoon an engine broke through and sank in 20 feet of water. Hearing the ice crack, the engineer and fireman saved themselves.

Owing to a water famine at Galveston, Ill., the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad Company had to withdraw some of its engines, and on Monday week last it paid $500 for ice to melt to supply other engines.

A Proper Penalty.

A bill is pending in the Legislature to make the penalty for highway robbery, hanging, on the second conviction for that crime. The Sacramento Bee hit the nail square on its head when it said that hanging should follow the first conviction, and then there would be no occasion for any more trials and convictions. In the early days of this State when death was the penalty for highway robbery it was much safer traveling than it has been since it was abolished. It is a disgrace to our State that this crime has become so prevalent as to compel Wells, Fargo & Co. to close their offices and decline transacting business at many important points, the robbery of their treasure boxes occurring too frequently to make their business profitable. No punishment but hanging will deter men from taking to the road for criminal purposes. A few years at San Quentin, where the criminal lives on the "fat of the land" and revels in a lovely garden of the choicest flowers, is a season of pleasant recreation, instead of punishment, and they leave that institution prepared to take to the highway for another carnival of crime. Let the bill pass.

The election of a Democratic U. S. Senator from Tennessee settles the complexion of the next Senate in favor of the Democrats, who will have two majority if Davis, of Illinois, and Mahone, of Virginia, vote with that party, which they, probably, will do; but if they should "throw off" and go with the Republicans, there would be a tie, and Vice President Arthur would have the casting vote. The House will be Republican, having 148 Republicans to 145 Democrats. There will be 2 Readjusters and 8 Greenbackers in the next House.

The Committees of both Houses have agreed upon an apportionment of the State for Legislative representation, and Inyo and Mono, as now, form an Assembly District, and Inyo, Mono, San Bernardino and San Diego are a Senatorial District.

A young man in Carson, Nev., has fallen heir, it is said, to 500,000 florins by the death of his grandfather in Munich, Bavaria.

BRIDGEPORT, JANUARY 29, 1881.

JOB PRINTING.—Job printing of the finest description will be furnished at this office at Sacramento prices.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

BEAR STORY.—Here is a true bear story. A few months ago two of our county officials invested $40 in a pair of grizzly cubs, and then the trouble commenced. While here $36 worth of beef and 20 pounds of white sugar disappeared. A "friend" gave the fortunate owners a "point," and suggested that, as the people of Bodie had seen the elephant, tiger and amateurs, and boasted of having four newspapers, doing all the jury duty, paying all the taxes, running the county in debt, and furnishing an additional Superior Judge, Bodie would be "the place" for another show. So Bodie was decided upon, but the exchequer was empty. For short, we will call the proprietors Frank and Jack. As he would soon get the money back and more too, Jack borrowed $10 and Frank went to Bodie, rented a room for $20—not paid; and opened the menagerie. The gate money came in slowly, and went out fast—loaned to Bodieites. Frank went to Mill Creek, leaving the pets in Bodie. Affairs becoming serious and urgent, resort to the telegraph resulted in further depleting Jack's pocket. Returning to Bodie, the man in charge offered Frank $100 for the bears. It was gladly accepted, but the fellow said he had no money, but he would mortgage a valuable piece of property in Bodie as security. The document, mortgaging "all his right, title and interest, with improvements thereon," of a lot belonging to A. J. Severe, was duly recorded; Jack paying $2 75 to the Recorder. The bears were taken to Carson, where one died. The speculation resulted in a loss of about $100. Massa says it was a vile affair, and he don't want any more bears of that sort in his.

PUTTY.—Putty is an important factor at the new Court House, and it is a fact that the building will not be accepted until 25 pounds of putty arrive from Sacramento. Thus far 175 pounds have been stuck in the edifice, and, judging by murder trials, the jury room will often have lots of heads of the same sort. As Bodie claims a monopoly of jury duty, here is a nut for its citizens to crack.

UNCONSTITUTIONAL.—Judge Hayne, of the Superior Court of San Francisco, has declard the law to compel mining companies to post up monthly statements of their business, unconstitutional, it being a "special law, its provisions being applicable only to mining corporations. This will "let out" mining Superintendents from making their weekly statements under oath and posting them.

MORE COUNTY BOARDERS.—Deputy Sheriff Band, of Coleville, came up on Sunday, having in charge two Chinamen, sent up for disturbing the peace of the Antelopers. Ah Soon plead guilty, and got 30 days; but Ah Sing stood a trial by jury and was sen up for 50 days. Deputy Sheriff Vial is now running quite a boarding house.

SUPERIOR JUDGE.—A petition is before the Legislature for the repeal of the Act for an additional Superior Judge for Mono county. Bodie had the law enacted, and it asks for its repeal. But it comes late in the day, after providing for two Courts, Chambers and jury-rooms in the Court House being erected.

ACCIDENTS.—From the Free Press we learn that on yesterday morning, Richard Crayton, at work in the upraise of Standard mine, had his left arm badly mangled by the falling of a rock; and on the same day, in the same mine, Charles A. Lee was seriously injured by a cave, having two ribs broken.

INCORPORATED.—Certificate of Incorporation of the Great Sierra Mining Company has been filed in the office of the Secretary of State. Works, Hog District; office in San Francisco; Directors, G. W. Terrill, A. C. Hammond, Francis Kostick, H. C. Hubbell, B. W. Mudge.

MAIL.—A petition is in circulation for a tri-weekly mail from Bridgeport to Carson and back, via Antelope Valley. It is much needed, and we trust the route will be established.

A FINE RAIN.—After a heavy gale on Thursday night a snow storm set in yesterday morning and continued till evening, when it turned in to rain, and it has been coming down very copiously all this day.

MET.—The Board of Supervisors met on Tuesday to place names of taxpayers in the jury boxes, but adjourned without so doing.

CHINESE NEW YEAR.—To-day being the the commencement of their New Year, the Chinese last night initiated it by a liberal use of explosives.

BOARD OF SUPERVISORS.—The Board of Supervisors will meet in regular session on next Monday week.

BILLS.—Assemblyman Jo. Wasson will accept thanks for copies of bills introduced by him.

DULL.—Times are rather dull around the Court House, these days.

AFLOAT.—The upper portion of Main street is under water.

AT WORK.—Superior Judge Wiggin, of this county, has been presiding in the Alameda Probate Court, in place of Judge Crane.

THE DAILY REPORT.—The name of the San Francisco Stock Report has been changed to The Daily Report. It is one of the best conducted and most readable of the San Francisco dailies; and is withal a true friend of Mono county.

PLEASANT ROOMS.—Those desiring a furnished and pleasant room, or rooms, can be suited at Henry Donnel's, on Main street, and first house below the new Court House.

DENTISTRY.—Dr. Preshaw, who has entered upon his fourth year's residence in Bodie, and can be found at his new rooms, Standard Building, next door to the telegraph office, does everything in the line of dentistry skilfully and promptly. We commend him to the public.

The schooner Joseph P. Lacheca of Portland, Maine, has sailed with a mining expedition for Atrato river, Panama. She is commanded by Lieutenant S. C. Payne of the United States Navy. The expedition is provided with valuable charts, many of which belong to the Government. The capital of the Company, represented by experts on board, is $500,000, every dollar of which has been taken up. The stock is held by parties in New York, Maine, Virginia, New Hampshire and Rhode Island. While it is a fact worthy of mention that nearly every officer of the navy who has ever been on the river holds certificates of the Company. Two of the Directors of the Company, William Sargent and Wm. T. Curtis, both of Portland, Maine, accompany the expedition. The machinery for working the bed of the river was built in Bristol, and has been tested. The members of the expedition are young men, graduates of leading colleges.

Assembly Bills Passed.

The following Assembly bills have been passed by the Assembly:

Amending the Penal Code to determine when husband and wife may testify against each other in criminal cases.

To prohibit the naturalization of Chinese.

Compelling the savings banks and loan societies to publish sworn statements of accounts of deceased depositors.

Amending Section 413 of the Political Code.

To encourage the destruction of coyotes and other wild animals, by offering a bounty for scalps.

Authorizing counties and municipalities to receive property by bequest.

The following U. S. Senators have been elected:

Nebraska, Gen. Chas. A. Van Wyck.
Tennessee, Jackson.
Texas, Maxey.
Wisconsin, Sawyer.

For carpenters and builders there is nothing to do on the Comstock. Men who formerly worked gangs of from forty to sixty men are now glad to get a job for themselves at putting in a piece of sidewalk, putting down a crossing or repairing a broken fence.

Stockton has a little romance, a brother and sister who had been separated for thirty years, having by chance been brought together and making recognition. Both have been living in Stockton for the last twelve years, but unaware of each other. It was a happy reunion.

Samuel Clough, son of A. W. Clough of the Mariposa Hotel, in Merced, is in his fourteenth year, and weighs 205½ pounds. The Mercedians want to see his equal in the State.

It is almost impossible to get wood at any price, in Hollister. A load sold at the rate of $18 per cord. Bakers are paying $25 a thousand for pickets for use as fuel.

The United States has allowed W. H. Davis of Oakland $60,000 for damages sustained by him during the rebellion of 1861.

United States Senator-elect John F. Miller left on the overland train for Washington, Tuesday, accompanied by his family.

It is reported that the Klamath River raised eighty-two feet during the recent storm.

HOUSE AND FARM.

FACTS FOR FARMERS.—If you invest your money in tools and then leave them exposed to the weather, it is the same as loaning money to a spendthrift without security—a dead loss in both cases.

If you invest money in books and never read them, it is the same as putting your money into a bank, but never drawing either principal or interest.

If you invest your money in fine stock, and do not feed and protect it and properly care for it, it is the same as dressing your wife in silk to do kitchen work.

If you invest your money in fine fruits, and do not guard them and give them a chance to grow and prove their value, it is the same as putting a good hand in the field with poor tools to work with.

If you invest your money in a fine house, and do not cultivate your mind and taste so as to adorn it with intelligence and refinement, it is like wearing broadcloth and a silk hat to mill.

If you invest your money in fine clothes and do not wear them with dignity and ease, it is as if a ploughman were to sit at a jeweller's table to make and adjust hair springs.

If you invest your money in strong drink it is the same as turning hungry hogs into a growing cornfield. Ruin has followed in both cases.

If you invest your money in the last novel, it is the same as employing a tailor's dandy to dig your potatoes.

The New York Herald recommends as an excellent remedy for sprains, sores and bruises, sprained hock joints and stiff joints generally, in domestic animals, a liniment composed of Creosote, one ounce; turpentine, one ounce; olive oil, two ounces; mix and rub upon the affected parts.
